My dear friend Harold,

Last Friday I mailed you a book, and enclosed a letter. After I had sent it downstairs to be packed and mailed, I realized I had forgotten to send with it an envelope with my address on it, which I always like to do.

Another ^{also} new book came to the library, Nov. 22, 1963: You are the jury, by David W. Belin, Esq. (The "Esq." is self-advertising as a lawyer.) I wonder if you have seen it. It is primarily excerpts from the 26 vols., and puffery of what a fabulous job he did on the Warren Commission, plus a few barbs at Mark Lane. (You are not mentioned in it at all.) Weisberg, Harold, is not in index, nor is Garrison, Jim. It's a terribly boring book, although beautifully designed, and fabulous publicity. I remember when I wrote you I was reading Newman's book, you wrote me back that you also were "struggling through it." This book is just like it, dull, dull, dull. Look forward to hearing from you.

Your friend,
Jim.
